The Risk Report focuses on the potential character blindspots (counter-productive tendencies) that potentially pose a risk to an organisation. The report serves as a general indication of risk potential based on economic crime research in the South African financial industry and seven dimensions relating to integrity at work. As no human is wholly virtuous, each person exposes an organisation to some extent of risk. Risk, however, is context specific.

A Financial Controller, for example, should be risk averse, yet a degree of risk-taking may be tolerated in a Strategic Leadership position. To inform your decision regarding the degree of acceptable risk, it is therefore advised to apply these risk indicators in relation to the organisation's risk culture, the given position's risk-tolerance and the rest of the behavioural information in this integrated report.

* Note that when in the green zone, the particular factor in isolation does not pose a significant risk i.t.o. economic crime. A score of below 10 on any of the Key Factors in combination with one or more other below-average Key scores may however contribute towards a greater economic crime risk.

Yolanda scored below average on one of the four main risk-indicator scores.

Due to a slight inclination towards a subjective approach, Yolanda may occasionally tend to rationalise counterproductive behaviour in situations where the consequences thereof may potentially have a negative impact at work. Yolanda's loyalty and respect for authority may sometimes depend on the extent to which the organisation's reward (financial and non-financial) is perceived to match the individual's effort and/or desirable outcome. Yolanda may tend to be somewhat opinionated and even a bit self-righteous at times. The individual is likely to sometimes question and challenge rules, regulations and instructions when the purpose is unclear or contradicting own ideas. When in an environment or position where obedience, respect or collaboration is key, Yolanda may tend to be perceived as a bit rebellious. Yolanda seems slightly less transparent than most others. In certain situations, the individual may be a bit secretive or withholding. Yolanda may believe that the way in which things are said is more important than the true message.

Based on Yolanda's level of optimism, it appears as though the individual's moral judgement may currently be clouded as a result of personal-or work-related circumstances. Additional probing may confirm. Subsequently, appropriate intervention may enhance Yolanda's judgement to a degree.

The individual's psychometric profile appears to be skewed. Combined with a tendency to lack optimism, it is likely that Yolanda is very self-critical which may negatively influence the manner in which the individual responds to psychometric questionnaires. Additional probing may confirm.

Based on the particular combination of characteristics, the individual seems more likely than most others to portray behaviour related to high economic crime risk.
